

Sirs: Please do not make the mistake of allowing conglomerates access to purchasing more radio and tv stations. They control the airwaves with drab commercial-loaded unlistenable junk... and you know what? They used to say "if you don't like it switch to something else" There is no "something else"...they own it all. WGMS radio is a perfect example. It was once a fine classical station with large chunks of music sprinkled with a few commercials and pleasant chatter. Now it is large chunks of commercials with occasional pieces of repetitious "top ten format style" classical playlist. It is just plain unlistenable. Another case was a local low watt am radio station that played music standards from the 1940s and 50s...but the conglomerate owner took that format off in favor of more commercials and a talk format. The result is there are no radio stations playing standards any more in this market of almost 3 million. When I turn on the radio there is usually a commercial playing and I can switch to many stations and its the same result...commercials. Also you never know where the broadcast is coming from...local announcers are gone...local programming is gone. It is all because of greed. These stations could make a smaller profit and have less commercials to better serve the public but they would rather control the airwaves and choke us with their no identity programming commercial glut.
